Franco Prinsloo

(b. 1987)

Franco Prinsloo is an award-winning composer and conductor from South Africa. He creates in a diverse variety of contemporary classical styles with a specific focus on choral music, vocal music, and music for theatre.

In 2021 he received a Fellowship in Music Composition from the London College of Music. Prinsloo established and conducts the semi-professional Vox Chamber Choir in 2017. The multi-award winning choir has performed in notable venues around the world and premiered Prinsloo's new mass, Missa Brevis "San Marco", in the Basilica San Marco in Venice, Italy.

Prinsloo is an active composer in the contemporary music scene in South Africa. He has also been commissioned by prominent international choirs including: The King's Singers, Kammerchor | Vocalisti, the Akustika Chamber Singers, the University of Stellenbosch Choir, the University of Pretoria Camarata, and the acclaimed overtone singer Anna- Maria Hefele, among others.

His original compositions are frequently prescribed for the National ATKV Applous Choir competition. A selection of his music is published internationally by publishers Helbling Verlag, Austria as well as publications at Beckenhorst Press in the USA.

Prinsloo composed a contemporary choral musical: Naledi - An African Journey which had its debut in February 2016 in France and South Africa. The work has been staged on many occasions in South Africa and abroad with notable performances by the South African Youth Choir at the Artscape Theatre in Cape Town and a performance and album recording by the Vox Chamber Choir in 2019.

He has worked as arranger and conductor on several international album productions including composer Ihab Darwish's new work, Hekayat: Symphonic Tales. Albums of his original soundtracks for Television and Film are widely published and includes: Nêrens, Noord- Kaap, The Day We Didn't Meet, Wonderlus, Meisies wat fluit and many more.
